CURATORIAL NOTES

This acrylic painting draws inspiration from Paul Éluard's celebrated poem "Liberté," translating the poet's meditation on freedom into visual form. The work belongs to the Transcendence collection, exploring themes of liberation and transformation through abstracted figuration. At the composition's heart, a bird-like form rises from a grounded base, its fragmented body filled with vibrant geometric shapes that suggest the assembled components of hope itself.

Warm coral and salmon tones dominate the upper two-thirds of the canvas, creating an expansive field of optimistic color that occupies nearly sixty percent of the surface. This pinkish atmosphere contrasts sharply with the deep green zone anchoring the lower third, where darker values suggest the weight of past struggles or earthbound constraints. The central figure spans both realms, constructed from interlocking planes of red, orange, cream, and blue that catch the eye as they ascend. Thin black lines frame and connect these colored segments, providing structure while suggesting the boundaries that must be crossed in any journey toward freedom.

The 50×70 cm format allows the vertical composition to develop fully, with the bird form climbing through the color transition from green to coral. Small accent details—scattered dots and delicate linear elements—animate the surrounding space with a sense of movement and possibility. The acrylic medium produces crisp edges and saturated hues that reinforce the work's dynamic energy.

This piece includes certificate of authenticity #20231231-0085 and bears the artist's signature at bottom right. Now held in a private collection in France, the work exemplifies Quercy's approach to contemporary abstraction that balances symbolic content with formal invention.
