CURATORIAL NOTES

This third work in the series A Moment with You marks a shift in the series' internal logic. The earlier pieces measured the morning through expanding shadow and open ground. Here, the terre battue has become a bounded rectangle of warm ochre wash, set within the bare white of the paper. The Jardin du Luxembourg has contracted to its essential proposition: a defined place, held apart, where one might sit and wait. The question the title asks has not changed. But the light framing it has grown less patient.

The ochre field sits squarely within the composition, leaving the paper's white visible around all four edges. Two chairs appear as white reserves — forms held back within the wash, defined by unpainted paper. They stand closer together than in the earlier works and face the same direction, no longer arranged as a dialogue. The shadow beneath them has shortened and darkened to terracotta, falling direct and compact under the chairs rather than stretching outward across the ground. The sun is nearly overhead. The long oblique shadows of early morning, which burned red at nine sixteen and spread violet at nine seventeen, are gone.

The work measures thirty by thirty centimetres on paper. The artist's signature is present on the work. No certificate number is recorded in the dataset. The work is registered as CLO0003. The work belongs to the A Moment with You series.

THE ARTIST

Caroline Lopez

Paris rooftops, Norman cliffs, Luxembourg chairs. Interior architect by training, Caroline Lopez draws what others walk past — the layered geometry of a quartier, the weight of a wave against chalk, an empty seat holding the shape of absence. She has exhibited across Paris salons and galleries since 2014.
