Few rooms in Paris carry the mystique of Studio Harcourt – the legendary portrait studio on rue de Lota in the 16th, famous for its silver-screen black-and-white lighting. Elements Jazz played there twice, for private parties, in its core trio: Arnaud Quercy on piano, Elliot Langlois on double bass and Romain Courty on drums. Against that cinematic backdrop the trio kept things intimate and swinging, threading standards through the evening in one of the most iconic settings in the capital – a refined, exclusive jazz soundtrack for a private celebration.
