On place Parmentier in Neuilly-sur-Seine, just west of Paris, Restaurant Gustave is the kind of warm, low-lit dining room made for close-up jazz. Here Elements Jazz played around its core – Arnaud Quercy on piano, Elliot Langlois on double bass and Romain Courty on drums – a stripped-back, conversational line-up that lets the standards breathe, with guest-star guitarist Jeremy Quentin adding colour on the night.

Swing, a little bossa nova and the occasional blues from the group's working book of Ellington, Jobim and Cole Porter drifted across the tables: an intimate evening of acoustic jazz as the soundtrack to dinner.

A detailed map of the Neuilly-sur-Seine district in Paris, France. The map shows the Seine river flowing through the center, with several bridges crossing it. Key landmarks include the Bois de Boulogne to the west and the Bois de St. Mandé to the east. Major roads like Avenue des Champs-Élysées and Avenue Foch are visible. A red dot marks the location of Porte Maillot, which is situated near the intersection of Rue de la Boissière and Rue de la Chapelle. Other labeled areas include Les Sablons, Villa des Ternes, and Neuilly - Porte Maillot. The map also shows various parks and green spaces, as well as residential areas.
